Dear Ms. Raitt:

RE: CANADA POST

I am concerned with how the plan to eliminate door-to-door mail delivery, the increase to stamp prices, and the closing of post offices will affect the public.

These cuts will make it difficult for many seniors and those with disabilities to access their mail due to the risk of injury when they are already dealing with mobility issues.

I am also concerned with what the impact of post office closures and the increase in stamp prices will have on the public. The postal service needs to remain accessible and affordable to all.

Canada Post should consider ways to adjust to the changing postal environment such as postal banking and expanded parcel delivery.

I encourage you to direct Canada Post to reverse its proposed service cuts and consult meaningfully with everyone affected.

Sincerely yours,

Maria Viola
